- A Baby can laugh, reach and grasp, and move toys from hand to hand
- B Baby can help get dressed by holding out their arms and legs, and they can say four or five words
- C Baby can push up their head and chest when laying on their tummy
- D Baby can stand and follow simple directions like “please come here”
- E Baby can stand while holding on and feed themselves finger foods

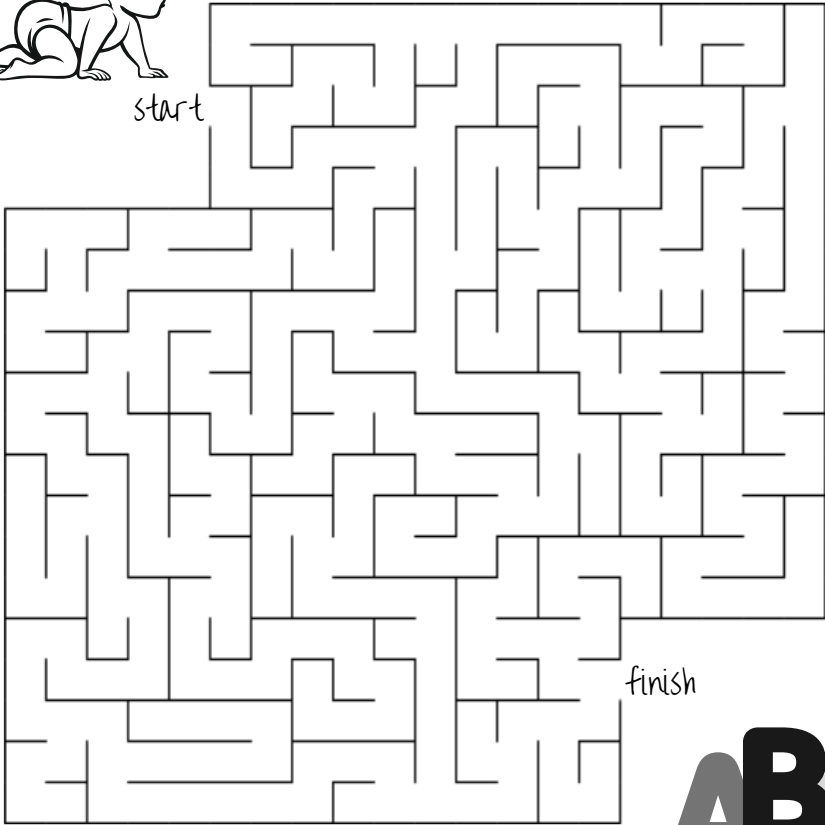

While playing with a towel or parachute, children can learn spatial concepts of “up and down” and “under and on top of,” strengthening their motor skills while socializing and making cognitive connections of these new concepts.

Practice math skills while having a snack

When eating oranges – any fruit that you can break off – it's a fun opportunity to introduce math and language skills, while helping the child to make inner connections (cognitive skills). You can count, you can place it on a tray using patterns, you can label the color and describe the pieces or shapes you are making.

Families look different for everyone.
CHS embraces all families.

Create your family tree with people who make up your family.

CHS partners with parents to overcome challenges that led to involvement in the foster care system so they can bring their children safely back home. If that's never possible, then we find forever families for children through adoption.
